They have to respond by the deadline of 2nd June. During the interactive dialogue Sri Lanka won high praise for protecting human rights while fighting terrorism from a majority of the delegations that took the floor last week. A number of delegations praised Sri Lanka for the quality of its national report, which identified national priorities, capacity-building and technical assistance needs. They also highlighted Sri Lanka's meaningful contributions to the Human Rights Council, Sri Lanka's ratification of most core international human rights instruments, its cooperation with United Nations mechanisms; its democratic standing; the well developed institutional framework to promote human rights; inter alia the establishment of the Permanent Inter-Ministerial Standing Committee on Human Rights, the National Human Rights Commission and the adoption of the National Plan of Action for the Promotion and Protection of Human Rights. Hon. C.R. De Silva, Attorney General and Hon. Mahinda Samarasinghe, Minister of Disaster Management and Human Rights at the UPR Session on 13th May 2008 Delegations further stressed Sri Lanka's valuable commitments and efforts made despite a number of long lasting challenges; including prolonged armed conflict and natural disasters. Remarkable achievements were also noted in the advancement of economic, social and cultural rights, including women's health and survival. They appreciated the very comprehensive report presented by Sri Lanka and the openness and frankness with which responses were provided to both written questions. Of the recommendations made Sri Lanka accepted over half and undertook to examine and respond to others at the next session. The head of delegation and the Minister of Disaster Management and Human Rights Hon. Mahinda Samarasinghe assured delegations that Sri Lanka was fully committed to implementation of these recommendations and thanked them for their concern and support. A total of 68 delegations were to make statements during the interactive dialogue of the UPR, however, due to time constraints only 56 speakers were allowed to do so.

During his presentation before the Working Group of the UN Human Rights Council for the Universal Periodic Review the Minister reaffirmed Sri Lanka's commitment to the protection and promotion of human rights. The UPR of Sri Lanka was led by the troika of Bangladesh, Cameroon and Ukraine and held at the Palais des Nation in Geneva from 14:30 - 17:30 on 13 May 2008. Minister Mahinda Samarasinghe said "The promotion and protection of human rights, based on internationally accepted standards, is a priority for all democratic governments, and we believe it is our primary duty to safeguard the human rights of all Sri Lankan people. Indeed, a positive obligation is cast upon the branches of Government to safeguard those rights which find expression in our national Constitution. Moreover, we have fulfilled international obligations through participation in most key human rights instruments and labour conventions, the full implementation of which is also one of our goals. We expect one of the outcomes of participation in the UPR process will be that international partners will come forward to assist us achieve the priorities set out in our National Report". impunity. The Attorney General replied in detail to these questions as did other members of the delegation of Sri Lanka with regard to questions raised about the abrogation of the Ceasefire Agreement, the reinvigoration of the 13th Amendment to the Constitution, and the role of the TMVP, the SLMM, the COI and the IIGEP.
